Avenida Paulista se repleta con miles de personas en la mayor marcha del Orgullo en el mundo

La principal avenida de São Paulo se llenó este mes con miles de personas envueltas en la bandera amarilla y verde de Brasil y cautivadas por una figura dominante en un camión con altavoces.

Desde arriba, la escena podría haber pasado por uno de los muchos mítines políticos celebrados en el mismo lugar por el ex presidente Jair Bolsonaro, el líder de extrema derecha brasileño que ha infamemente declarado que nunca podría amar a un hijo gay.

(Aunque, por ser justos, la enorme bandera arcoíris sería una pista.)

De hecho, se trataba de una de las mayores marchas del Orgullo del mundo, y la persona en el camión de sonido era Phabullo Rodrigues da Silva, de 30 años, el hijo gay de una madre soltera de clase trabajadora en el norte de Brasil.

Todos en la multitud lo conocían como Pabullo Vittar, una drag queen de 6 pies y 2 pulgadas con un jersey brasileño reluciente y cortos de mezcilla desgarrados - una de las mayores estrellas del pop de esta nación de 203 millones.
