you imagine the technology industry, probably think things that don't exist in physical space like apps and the internet browser on your phone. But all this infrastructure necessary to store all this information – data centers – physical servers housed in parks or around cities – consume enormous amounts of energy. Despite the name, the infrastructures used by the "cloud" represent more global emissions with the effect of commercial flights; In 2024, for example: 5 billion YouTube videos reach annually a viral music

This is an extremely environmentally destructive side for the technology industry. Although it has played a large role in reaching net zero, by giving us smart and efficient solar it is fundamental that we focus on our environmental footprint. Large models like ChatGPT are some of the most energy-intensive technologies because research suggests, for example, that the energy they use to produce a single word is equivalent to the energy used to produce a single word. A single word from GPT-3 in Microsoft's data centers could be used to cool the chat GPT-3 servers. It's a difficult news about this technological self-glorification that has been hidden from the public eye of this industry."
